Pregnancy Childbirth and Early Parenting Education

When might I need The Baby Planner?

So when might I need The Baby Planner?

Obtaining information about pregnancy, childbirth and early parenting is often inaccessible due to:

- Short appointment times with your maternity provider which doesn't allow for the answering of many of your important questions.
- You may be too intimidated or not quite know where to start or what to ask when it comes to your important questions.
- Inflexible standard parent education sessions by most maternity providers which doesn't allow for shift workers or partners that work away, which is common in Perth.
- An increase in migration and transient lifestyles means that many people no longer live close enough to family and friends to receive adequate support in pregnancy and parenthood.
- Today's economy may be forcing both you and your partner to continue working until close to the birth of your baby in order to meet financial obligations, which leaves less time for birth and parenting preparation.
- A market that is flooded with parenting and birth guidebooks which are often too overwhelming and contain a lot of conflicting advice.
- A lack of time to actually read these books!
- A market that is flooded with MUST HAVE baby items that are foreign and overwhelming to you.
- Many pregnant women are finding it difficult to function in their normal, everyday life while suffering from the usual discomforts of pregnancy like fatigue and nausea/vomiting, let alone being able to research and run around in preparation for the birth and parenthood.

Whatever your particular needs are, I am willing and able to accommodate you.

Remember,

The only thing I can't do, is give birth for you!
